The BPCA meeting this morning proceeded once again in secretive fashion, with no details of the agenda being posted ahead of the meeting. Chairman Dennis Mehiel began by announcing the opening of Asphalt Green, with a resolution welcoming them and wishing them success. Anne Fenton made no comment, nor did Matthew Monahan.

Next, they discussed Pier A, which is six months behind the revised schedule, and many years behind schedule since the BPCA assume control from the city. The shell will be turned over to the Poulakakos restaurant group by July 1st. After the restaurant is built, the opening date is "late Spring of 2014".

The plaza around Pier A will break ground by July 1st.

The West Thames bridge was downplayed once again, with Mehiel only saying, "Nothing new to report....we'll see how that goes"

The Emergency Contract Subcommittee formed after Hurricane Sandy, to expedite repairs, will be dismantled by July 1.

The BPCA is proceeding with the bond refinancing. See our story for more details.

A lengthy discussion ensued over the insurance required for the next flood. See our story for more details.

An amendment was made to the contract with Brookfield allowing them to form a public gym and clothing retail shops.
